

Revenge From a Serpent God

According to an indigenous legend, the deafening roar of the Great Waters (Iguassu) was created when a warrior fell in love with a beautiful virgin.

However she was to be offered to a serpent god who lived in the calm waters of the river. In order to avoid her sacrifice, both decided to sail away in a canoe.

Furious with the escape, the serpent churned up the ground, thus dredging the lovers' canoe into the mighty Devil's Throat.

Brazilian Side Tour

Your guided tour starts steps from Cataratas Hotel. From time to time, this path through unspoiled Iguassu National Park leads to a designated viewpoint, where you will see and distantly hear, live from Argentina, a marvelous, splendid, almost endless tiara of waterfalls.

Keep walking and the sound of water will get progressively louder. A left turn, and the path will become a stone catwalk extending like a pier over the heart of the shallow Iguassu River, The Devil's Throat. There you will feel what water power means.

Bird Park

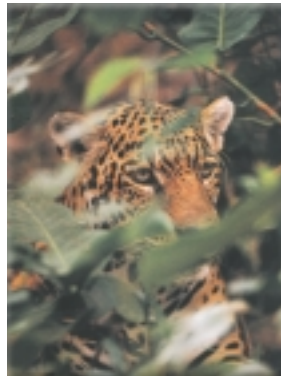

This world class park is situated in 5 hectares of native subtropical forest. It offers tourists, ecologists, photographers and ornithologists an opportunity to enter huge forest aviaries to study and photograph more than 800 birds in their natural habitat without the restriction of netting and cages. Exciting new exhibits show caiman, snakes, and butterflies.

Iguassu National Park
